

[FAIR PREVIEW]

Salon Art + Design Is Back — and Worth the Wait

The 10-year-old show returns to New York's Park Avenue Armory this week with an impressive roster of dealers and a robust assortment of furniture, fine art and jewelry.

BY FRED A. BERNSTEIN

The stunning rooms close to the Armory's Park Avenue entrance will be used for special exhibitions. Artist John Greytak, of STUDIO GREYTAK, will turn the Colonel's Room into an immersive simulation of a Montana landscape as a backdrop for his Universe collection, comprising furniture and lighting made from free-form mineral specimens and patinated aluminum and bronze sculpted to resemble craggy rock formations.

The armory's Colonel's Room will be the site of an immersive exhibition by STUDIO GREYTAK, which will showcase pieces from its Universe Collection, such as its IMPACT and EROSION tables, shown at left and right, respectively.