Discussing Salon Art + Design with the Fair's Executive Director

This year marks the tenth anniversary of Salon Art + Design, one of the most unique fairs in the country. After being forced to cancel the 2020 edition due to COVID-19, the fair is back in 2021 to showcase breathtaking fine art and incredible design. Art & Object's editor-in-chief spoke to the fair's executive director, Jill Bokor, about the history of Salon Art + Design, the upcoming edition, and the future of art fairs in a post-pandemic world.

In the outer rooms of the Armory we hold our special exhibitions and they're very varied. Studio Greytak from Montana will debut its collection of design work utilizing minerals, many of them millions of years old, in a very Montana-esque setting. Each year we have a special jewelry exhibition and this year's is by Didier of London, a world-renowned gallery for artists, architects, and designer jewelry. Also previewing her new line of home design is the Brazilian jewelry designer Silvia Furmanovich. In this new collection, she has kept her special sensibility for high jewelry turning it into functional design. She has created a Brazilian rainforest setting in which to showcase these dazzling pieces.
