NYC SHOWHOUSE*

Open through December 11, 2022, Holiday House NYC 2022 Designer Showhouse is back after two years due to COVID. For the 2022 edition, the Breast Cancer Research Foundation (BCRF) fundraiser event took over two fabulous penthouse apartments at The Kent, a 30-story luxury residential tower on the Upper East Side of Manhattan.

Since 2008 Holiday House NYC founder and breast cancer survivor Iris Dankner, along with design chairs Amy Lau and Thom Filicia, joins forces with the industry's top interior designers to present chic and cutting-edge designs in support of BCRF and, of course, to our delight!

Event sponsor Allan Oppenheimer from Extell Development Company said it best when describing the 2022 location at The Kent as "some of the most unique [homes] on New York's Upper East Side with expansive layouts, the finest finishes, and incredible views of the skyline, East River and Central Park, allowing all attendees to experience the very best of New York while simultaneously participating in such a meaningful cause."

Aamir Khandwala Interior Design

For Aamir Khandwala, design has the power to capture ineffable qualities of experience. In his many works, the designer is famous for bringing his client's vision to life, never being afraid of going for big statement pieces, bright colors, or elegant designs in all ways and forms.

In this space, Amair partnered with Modernist Cuisine Gallery by Nathan Myhrvold and Montana-based gems and minerals brand Studio Greytak to create a unique exhibition space inspired by the winter solstice. On display in the grand hallway of The Kent's Penthouse B is Myhrvold's Icelandic Collection, a series of photos taken during a two-week journey throughout the East and South of Iceland.

The mastery of using color is the defining element of this Holiday House 2022.

But Riki Wagh Design and Neil Kerman Gallery take the crown with this incredible and beautiful way of adding color to the hallways that join together many of the rooms of The Kent.

There is no texture too wild or pattern too confusing. Everything fits in this work of art.
