5 High-Design Mirrors That Will Add Light and Style to Any Room in Your Home

Extraordinary designs from Studio Greytak, Victoria Wilmotte and Roche Bobois easily elevate your space.

Like most furnishings, mirrors are pieces of functional décor; utilitarian objets d'art, if you will. They also perform magic. In addition to offering the user a look at his or her exterior self, mirrors bounce light around a room, helping to brighten a space. They also reflect anything in their path, doubling that item's existence (and simultaneously inverting it). A mirror even multiplies space itself. This silvered piece of glass is not just a tool for vanity, but a weather fixer and an architectural aid. The Chinese design principles of feng shui assert that mirrors, when properly placed, can assist moving energy through a room.

During these shortened days, mirrors are always a good idea. Kouros Maghsoudi's Doodool, will make you want to party and provide a full-length reflection of your outfit. John Pomp's Fairmount would be the perfect presence in an entry hall, announcing your steadfast conviction to good taste. A moody mirror from Studio Greytak's Lava series can act as a focal point, enlivening an intimate environment, like a study or dressing room. See for yourself.

Lava 6, Studio Greytak

Studio Greytak is what happens when one creates a career out of childhood fascinations. John Greytak, whose company is based out of Missoula, Mont., delighted in collecting natural curiosities as a kid. Fast-forward a few decades and he now sources gems from mineral shows around the world that he uses to adorn his mirror creations. His bespoke pieces, while solely of the Earth, have an otherworldly aura. The Lava 6 mirror, made from Brazilian agate and hand-mirrored slumped glass, is like a piece of jewelry for the wall. $12,000
